Re: Complaint Against Bush-Cheney '04, Eric Tanenblatt, and Office of the Governor of the State of Georgia

To whom it may concern:

My name is George Anderson. I am an ethics activist in the State of Georgia. My address is 18 Twickenham Road, Rome, Georgia 30161. I seek immediate FEC investigation and enforcement action against Bush-Cheney '04, Inc., Eric Tanenblatt, and Office of the Governor of the State of Georgia for violation of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1972 ("FECA"), as amended, 2 U.S.C. §§ 431 et seq. (1997 and Supp. 1999). Bush-Cheney '04, Inc., registered with the Federal Election Commission on May 16, 2003, as the principal campaign committee of George Bush and Richard Cheney for federal office in the 2004 elections. Eric Tanenblatt was at the time of the activities described below an employee of the Office of the Governor of the State of Georgia. Bush-Cheney '04 filings with the FEC list Tanenblatt as having made the maximum personal contributions allowed by law. Bush-Cheney '04 further acknowledges on its campaign website that Tanenblatt is responsible for raising more than $200,000 in additional campaign contributions.

(www.georgewbush.com/Donors/Rangers.aspx#rangers).

The Office of the Governor of the State of Georgia violated the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1972 ("FECA") when its employee, Eric Tanenblatt, used equipment and space in the Office of the Governor to make fundraising-related telephone calls on behalf of Bush-Cheney '04 as well as doing so while being paid a salary by the Office of the Governor. I discovered these activities through requests under Georgia's Open Records Law which allowed me to review telephone billing records for the Governor's Office and email messages on the network serving the Governor's Office.

I brought these facts to the attention of various people in the Governor's Office. After disclosing the results of my investigation, Tanenblatt reimbursed the State of Georgia for some, but not all, of the costs of these calls. Tanenblatt only reimbursed the State for calls that I brought to the State's attention. The State was not reimbursed for salary paid to Tanenblatt while he was in the office making these calls.

FOR THE

If the calls outlined in the attached documents were sanctioned by the Governor's Office, then the costs incurred by the Office of the Governor are an in-kind contribution by the State of Georgia that has never been reported by Bush-Cheney '04. If the calls were personal calls made by Tanenblatt on behalf of Bush-Cheney '04 then they should have been disclosed as such by Bush-Cheney '04 and the value of the calls should be added to contributions made by Tanenblatt. Payment of fundraising costs by a contributor constitutes a contribution itself. See, Advisory Opinion 1979-39; Advisory Opinion 1975-62.

Billing records for calls on state telephone lines assigned to Tanenblatt show that most of the calls were made during normal business hours. It is apparent that the employer meant for these activities to be part of Tanenblatt's employment as the employer had established a rule forbidding political activity during business hours. By Executive Order signed on January 13, 2003, Governor Perdue clearly stated, "Employees are permitted to express their opinions on political subjects and candidates and to take an active part in political campaigns outside of working hours...." Exec. Order 01.13.03.01 (Emphasis added.) Activities by Tanenblatt, then the Governor's Chief of Staff, making political phone calls within outside of working hours shows that those activities were clearly meant to be political contributions by the Office of the Governor.

Tanenblatt, at that time a salaried employee of the Governor's Office, was expected to work a particular number of hours per pay period. Paying the salary of an employee engaged in a political activity constitutes a political contribution by the employer, in this case, the Office of the Governor, under FECA (2 USC §431(8)) and Commission regulations (11 CFR §100.54) Commission regulations state that an employee paid on a salaried basis and expected to work a particular number of hours per period may engage in political activity during regular work hours without it being deemed a political contribution by the employer if the employee makes up the time to the employer within a reasonable time. (11 CFR 100.54(a). Tanenblatt's phone logs and his calendar do not record which hours were worked for the employer and which were worked for Bush-Cheney '04 on his own time. Indeed, the work was indistinguishable as evidenced by the lack of records regarding hours worked, the use of state telephone equipment for both activities, the reimbursement of some costs only after getting caught, and the failure to account to the employer for time worked on Bush-Cheney '04 activities.

The fact that the Office of the Governor had no policies in place requiring employees in political positions to maintain records of their work for the State and political work done on their own time, albeit using state offices and telephones, shows that political activity was part of the job for senior staff such as Tanenblatt. When performing that job aids fundraising for a candidate for federal elective office, the payment of salary constitutes a campaign contribution which must be reported by the recipient.

822 long distance telephone calls were made on two telephone numbers assigned to Tanenblatt between January 13 and July 31, 2003. Bush-Cheney Campaign '04 held a fundraiser on June 24 at Reynolds Plantation in Greensboro, Georgia. Several of these telephone calls were directly to the site of the fundraiser or were to people and firms involved in organizing the fundraiser. Of the 822 calls, it appears that 347 are not related to state business. 28% of the calls were to the Washington beltway region – including the White House, lobbyists, law firms, and public relations firms. A large number of the calls during this time were to people identified by Bush-Cheney '04 as raising more than $200,000 in campaign contributions.

Specifically, the telephone records obtained from the Office of the Governor show that Eric Tanenblatt placed calls using State equipment to:

- The White House Office of Political Affairs (37 calls);
- Ron McDuffie with Bush-Cheney '04;
- Haley Barbour, then Governor-elect of Mississippi and President of Barbour Griffith & Rogers (identified as Bush-Cheney fundraisers);
- The Bonnar Group, a national fundraising company in Washington DC;
- Bo Callaway, former Chairman of the Georgia Republican Party;
- Alan Novak of Novak Strategic Advisors and a Bush-Cheney fundraiser;
- Andrew Entwistle of Entwistle & Cappucci, a Republican fundraising firm;
- Congressman Eric Cantor (R-VA) at his campaign number;
- The Dutko Group, a Washington lobbying firm (two members of the firm are identified by Bush-Cheney as fundraisers);
- Paul Bennecke, Political Director for the Georgia Republican Party;
- David Swords at McKenna, Long & Aldridge;
- Carl Collins of Public-Private Partnership;
- Jonathan Baron of Red Sea Campaign Consulting Company
- Steven Goldsmith, a Bush-Cheney '04 fundraiser;
- Log Cabin Republicans, a Republican Political Action Group;
- Thurman Enterprises, a lobbying firm;
- Bill Dudley, government relations with AFLAC;
- Christina Estrada of Gordon C. James public relation group;
- Fred Cooper, a Bush-Cheney '04 fundraiser;
- Jaime Reynolds, a Bush-Cheney '04 fundraiser;
- Calder Clay for Congress, campaign headquarters;
- Benedetti & Farris, event planners (planned the June 24, 2003 Bush-Cheney fundraiser);
- Steven Freund, Ritz-Carlton in Greensboro GA (site of the June 24, 2003 Bush-Cheney fundraiser);
- Rob Lever, Washington DC lobbyist;
- William Timkin, a Bush-Cheney '04 fundraiser;
- Ken Norman, Bush-Cheney Campaign '04;
- Hollis "Chip" The Felkel, Felkel Group (political relations firm running the June 24, 2003 Bush-Cheney fundraiser);
- Ed Brookover, II, Greener & Hook;
- Mercer Reynolds, Bush-Cheney '04 fundraiser and finance chair for Bush-Cheney;
- David Winstead, Bush-Cheney '04 campaign advisor;

2007.09.24

- Bob Young, former delegate to Republican National Convention and Bush-Cheney elector;
- Alec Poitevaut, state Republican chair and Bush-Cheney '04 fundraiser;
- Odell & Simms, direct marketers for Republican National Committee.

A "contribution" under FECA includes not only "anything of value made by any person for the purpose of influencing any election for Federal office," 2 USC §431(8)(A)(i), but also "the payment by any person of compensation for the personal services of another person which are rendered to a political committee without charge for any purpose." 2 USC §431(8)(A)(ii). Any payments made to Tanenblatt by the State of Georgia while he was using state equipment to perform functions for Bush-Cheney '04 constitutes a contribution.

FECA establishes dollar limits on contributions not to exceed "in the aggregate" $1,000. Any reimbursement by Tanenblatt for the use of state equipment in connection with the Bush-Cheney '04 fundraising activities is an in-kind contribution attributable to Tanenblatt which would cause him to exceed the statutory limitation on contributions. Receipt of such contributions by Bush-Cheney '04 violates 2 USC §441a(f).

The Federal Election Commission is urged to immediately investigate these activities.

Very truly yours,

GEORGE ANDERSON

Critics of Goldsmith's tenure as Indianapolis mayor dubbed him "ambition in a suit" This ambition was checked when Goldsmith lost his '96 gubernatorial bid. Recently, Goldsmith joined the corporate law firm of Baker & Daniels, where he specializes in government affairs Although Goldsmith's wife, Margaret, is Dan Quayle's cousin, Goldsmith backed Bush well before Quayle withered on the primary vine. In early '99, Goldsmith signed on as a top domestic policy advisor to Bush and Goldsmith and Pioneer Alan Hubbard hosted an early Bush fundraiser in Indianapolis After Goldsmith was first elected mayor in '91, he drew national attention for preaching the gospel of privatizing a raft of city services. Critics said it opened the flood gates of political contributions from private vendors seeking city contracts Goldsmith's privatization zeal mellowed some after the department that maintained city vehicles convinced him to let it bid against the private sector for its job The bureaucrats submitted the winning bid and then proceeded to deliver the service even cheaper than what they had bid. Still, Goldsmith's failed rally cry on the gubernatorial campaign trail was, "I've been CEO of Indianapolis I want to privatize all of Indiana "

There are lobbyists and there are lobbyists.

Any list of the more than 12,000 registered lobbyists in Washington who exercise their constitutional right "to petition the government for a redress of grievances" includes standouts whose names consistently turn up when their peers and members of Congress are asked who best represents their clients' interests.

Some of the names on The Hill's annual "Top Lobbyists" list are the omnipresent lobbyists who have been at the top of their firm or organization for decades. Others are up-and-comers including former members and staffers who recently made the transition from Capitol Hill to K Street. And still others are frequently mentioned in interviews with their colleagues for quietly and methodically completing the jobs their clients wanted done.

Lobbyists are often viewed by the public in a negative light, but most lawmakers understand that they are an essential part of the democratic system of self-government. During a recent hearing, Sen. Phil Gramm (R-Texas) described lobbyists as a vital — though often criticized — part of the legislative process.

"I would have to say the best information I get in the legislative process comes from people directly involved in the industry that is going to be affected — and from the people who represent them: the 'nefarious' lobbyists," said Gramm, who is retiring this year and could become a lobbyist himself.

Gramm also defended the close ties between lobbyists and lawmakers "There is an increasing trend in ... which politicians say people who know something about a subject are the last people we should ever talk to. That somehow knowledge is corruption."

If Gramm does decide to follow in the footsteps of some of his former colleagues, he will be one of many ex-lawmakers who continue to "retire" to K Street each year, like those who are listed on the chart below.

One caveat. Due to space restrictions, this list does not include corporate lobbyists, although it does include some government affairs specialists who are not registered lobbyists.

Eric Cantor
~~CANTOR~~

Stand:

The Chosen Republican

Richmond's Eric Cantor joins the House GOP leadership
by Susan J Crabtree
01/27/2003, Volume 008, Issue 19

AT FIRST GLANCE, Eric Cantor's life story resembles the biographies of scores of other suburban Republicans in Congress. Born and raised in the South, he attended a private Christian high school, and earned his law degree before returning home to work in the family business. He began his political career in the state legislature fighting to protect tobacco companies and return budget surpluses to taxpayers.

An unflinching fiscal conservative, the Virginia Republican is pro-life, supports the Second Amendment, and backs voluntary prayer in school. He's even a Rotarian.

But there's a critical difference: Cantor, 39, is the only Jewish Republican serving in the House. And there's no denying that his faith and passionate stands in defense of Israel have played a major role in his rapid ascent over just two years in Washington.

Two months ago Majority Whip Roy Blunt stunned colleagues by tapping Cantor to be his chief deputy, the same post Dennis Hastert held before becoming Speaker four years ago

"He's worked hard around the country to try to build bridges and support among the Jewish community and he did that very effectively," Blunt says. "As the only member of the House leadership—Republican or Democrat—who's Jewish, it gives him substantial credibility to help reach out in that direction."

Cantor joins the Republican leadership at a time when the party is straining to translate its ardently pro-Israel message into votes and financial support from Jews, a group Democrats have dominated at the ballot box for generations.

Republican insiders were quick to call his selection a stroke of genius. In his brief tenure in Washington, Cantor has built a reputation as a smooth political operator, a workhorse, and an articulate, energetic spokesman for the cause. He was barely installed in office before he began traveling the country, reaching out to such powerful national Jewish groups as the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC) and the Jewish Institute for National Security Affairs.

Just weeks ago, he addressed a group of AIPAC activists in West Palm Beach, Florida, a bastion of Jewish Democrats. "It's no secret that the mainstream Jewish community in this country is Democrat," Cantor said in an interview shortly after that trip. And members of the Jewish community "have a different domestic agenda often than most conservative Republicans do. But I think when it comes to Israel, all that gets set aside."

His message is music to Republican leaders' ears. House Majority Leader Tom DeLay, an uncompromising critic of Yasser Arafat, says Cantor is the first person he turns to on questions involving Israel.

Cantor's easy southern manner and ability to articulate complex foreign policy matters succinctly have also made him a regular on the national television talk circuit. On "Crossfire," he serves up pro-Israel sound bites opposite the likes of James Zogby of the Arab American Cantor says any foothold Republicans have gained in wooing the Jewish vote is largely due to George W. Bush, and argues that the president's strong support for Israel already has opened the door for Jews to flock to the Grand Old Party.

"9/11, that awful, awful tragedy that occurred because of a terrorist attack was really the catalyst," he said. "The Jewish community in America realized that there is a common enemy out there, and it is not Republicans."

His efforts have not been lost on leaders of the Jewish political community. Howard Kohr, the executive director of AIPAC, has called Cantor "a true leader when it comes to the Middle East." Matt Brooks, the chairman of the Republican Jewish Coalition, where Cantor is a board member, said the Virginia Republican is "uniquely capable of selling the Republican agenda to Jewish voters."

In his first year in Congress, he quickly won the support of influential Jewish GOP activists with deep pockets, including Fred Zeidman, a venture capitalist from Houston who Bush appointed chairman of the U.S. Holocaust Museum.

"I really liked him the first day I met him," Zeidman said of Cantor. "I wrote him a check."

As an adult, Cantor has never been shy about voicing his support for Israel, even though the issue was a mild undercurrent in his first primary battle against Virginia state senator Steve Martin, the son of a country preacher. He won by fewer than 300 votes.

But growing up in the good ol' boy South with a Baptist or Episcopal church on every other street corner, he learned to be reticent in his faith. Life as one of the only Jews in a high school class of 100 could be awkward.

Cantor's family chose to send him to Collegiate, a prestigious, nondenominational private school where there were daily chapel services. When his classmates bowed their heads to pray, he bowed too, but refrained from full participation in the prayers. His family stoked his faith by sending him to Hebrew school three times a week.

After earning his masters' in real estate at Columbia University in New York, where he met his wife, Diana, he became more vocal and active.

The Cantors volunteer their time to the Richmond-area Jewish community, which he estimates to be 12,000 to 14,000 strong, but barely 2 percent of the old Confederate capital's overall population. Cantor is on the board of and helped secure state funding for the Virginia Holocaust Museum and over the years has participated in the annual campaign to raise millions for the local Jewish Federation.

"I have come along in life to be a little more open about [my faith]," Cantor said. "I was very private about it and never really talked about it."

Cantor also keeps kosher, a fact that makes it difficult to swing by a Capitol Hill reception for a quick bite. But he would rather go hungry than ask for special arrangements.

"I will just make do . . . to me religion is a very private thing," he said.

Like so many Jewish immigrants to the United States, Cantor's grandparents on his father's side left Eastern Europe to make a home in New York City. His great uncle was the first to relocate to Richmond for an opportunity to work in the restaurant fixture business. His grandfather followed, but died when Cantor's father was just two years old. His grandmother ran Cantor's Grocery and, for a time, she and her two sons lived above the store.

Cantor's father went to law school, eventually starting a business developing real estate and shopping centers. It was a comfortable existence, but Eric remembers the long hours his dad put in.

"He always told me, the bottom line, the proof is in the pudding, just do the work," Cantor recalls.

This attitude, Cantor says, made his father a natural Republican and forms the foundation of his own conservative philosophy. Later, when he had more free time, his father dedicated it to the Richmond Republican political community, winning several local GOP offices. He was a key Virginia supporter for the 1984 Reagan-Bush campaign, and Eric was working precincts before he could vote.

Along the way, the Cantor family grew close to such prominent Virginia Republicans as Tom Bliley, who served as mayor of Richmond and went on to become a prominent elder statesman in Congress. During college, Eric interned in Bliley's congressional office and served as his driver and, years later, as his campaign manager. The relationship would pay off down the road, when Bliley's formidable resources and political machinery were widely credited with giving Cantor the edge in his razor-thin primary victory during his first campaign for Congress in 2000.

"He is one of those people who have the unusual and uncommon ability to disagree with people without becoming disagreeable," Bliley said.

Cantor's easy charm and commitment to the issues helped drive Jewish voters to the polls to vote for him. Now Republicans hope he can transfer that to the national stage. Although in the 2000 presidential election Al Gore took almost 80 percent of the Jewish vote, a recent poll shows that 37 percent approve of Bush's performance so far as president and 43 percent approve of the way Bush is handling Israel and the Middle East.

It will be a tough task but Cantor refuses to be daunted. "The message of trying to be there to provide government services and the government's helping hand.... The Democrat party has always been a little more effective in communicating to the Jewish community," he said. "But I think it's a totally new day, though, I really do."

Cities maketh and governments taketh away

Special to Bill Shipp's Georgia

While the federal government continues to stack up future debt for private citizens and businesses to eventually pay for, many say it's ludicrous for the City of Atlanta to even suggest that federal or state funds should help rebuild its sewers.

In less dramatic fashion, the same thing is happening to cities and towns across Georgia and the nation as a whole. They are being asked to produce the wealth for others to use and then (maybe) be distributed back to them. That makes cities a wishbone that's being pulled in opposite directions. They produce wealth, but are made to beg to get some crumbs back.

As the General Assembly readies to convene in January, its leaders would be smart to keep in mind the engine that in large part keeps our state growing -- its municipalities.

What fills state government coffers are tax proceeds that come from the increasing number of hardworking and successful individuals who are attracted to or near Georgia's cities. But the infrastructure that helps facilitate this trend is threatened by a dearth of funds. Schools, public transportation, health care and law enforcement are among the services that build and maintain Georgia's source of revenue.

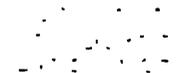

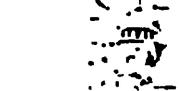

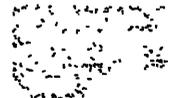

A public opinion poll conducted in Georgia last year shows that an overwhelming majority of Georgians see their home or nearby municipalities as the baseline of their lives:

- 82 percent said a clean, safe and active town located near them was "very important" to their quality of life.
- 97 percent said it's important to maintain and improve basic services in their communities, including water/sewer, roads and the like.
- 83 percent said the users of such services should help pay for them (including users who don't live in the towns, but shop and entertain in and pass through them).

- 72 percent said local elected officials are best suited to determine fees and taxes, and to manage government funds for the community. Only 20 percent said the Legislature is best suited for the task.

The challenge for state leaders is to deal with the budgetary constraints that are facing state government, while at the same time finding creative ways to allow those who depend on cities to preserve and enhance the essential services the cities provide. Many citizens find cities important to their lives, even if they live close to, but not within, the actual city limits.

If you go to town, you should help pay for it

... Look for one major Georgia corporation to virtually eliminate its governmental/public affairs department over the next few months. This at the same time that many other companies are starting to ramp up similar departments and government relations activities, all in order to take advantage of an increasingly favorable revenue and business climate.

Insiders note that such departmental eliminations and scale backs have been attempted by other major companies in the past, only to see the departments later restored and even enhanced. The company shall go nameless for now, and we'll report on the experiment's success down the road.

... The Essentials: A weekly working biography of a leading player in Georgia politics and government. This week, the man many consider to be the most powerful person in Georgia: Fred Cooper.

Cooper has been a major GOP power for many years. While a top executive at Flowers Industries, he served as chairman of the State Republican Party. He has also served as state chair or co-chair of virtually every Republican presidential campaign since the mid-1980s. Cooper is considered to be one of the most influential advisers to Gov. Sonny Perdue. For those unfamiliar with Cooper, who speaks softly but carries tremendous clout with Republicans, here are a few other interesting "essentials":

- A lawyer by training -- but more recently the past owner of numerous highly successful companies he later sold -- Cooper is considered a brilliant businessman whose expertise in mergers, acquisitions and leveraged buyouts is second to none.
- Fred Cooper is widely considered to be the closest individual in Georgia to the Bush family. Former President Bush and his wife Barbara are particularly fond of Cooper and his wife.
- Cooper heads the powerful "Loose Group," a collection of Republican/conservative business leaders who support like-minded candidates who are in major political races.

As one expert put it, "In the new Republican Georgia, if you don't know Fred Cooper, you don't know much."

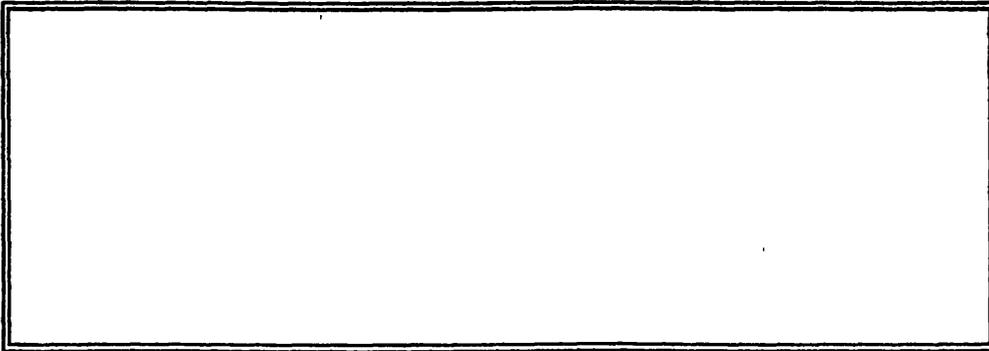

For his part, Cooper keeps a low profile and generally avoids both notoriety and public accolades. But most any truthful Republican will admit that Cooper is, along with a handful of others, a powerful force in the "New Georgia."

After hearing for the umpteenth time that the Bush fund-raising machine will easily rake in more than $200 million, Reynolds is eager to cool down such expectations.

Mercer Reynolds greets President Bush during his arrival at Greene County Airport in June.

"So far it's OK. It's good enough," he said of the first few months' fund-raising events, direct mail, telemarketing and Internet donations. "The goal we have is ambitious to begin with. So I don't expect to exceed that goal."

Even so, the campaign is set to announce this week that it already has collected more than $80 million, putting the president well on the way to smashing the $100 million record his campaign set four years ago.

Reynolds also has the satisfaction of knowing that a major contributor to the successful start was a June fund-raiser at Reynolds Plantation, the posh golf community he helped develop 75 miles east of downtown Atlanta near Greensboro, on his grandfather's land, where he spent his boyhood summers hunting for catawba worms to use as fish bait in the local creeks.

Bush landed at Greensboro's tiny airport, then traveled by motorcade through the town and countryside. Thousands of supporters lined the roads, hoisting pro-Bush signs and waving to the president, who stopped at least once to shake hands.

At the resort, he addressed a casual but well-dressed throng of 750 who paid at least $2,000 apiece to eat barbecue under a huge tent outside the clubhouse, where Bush gave a 26-minute speech touting his administration's achievements.

He also attended a private reception in the clubhouse for those who had given $20,000 or more.

The final tally turned out to be $2.5 million.

When it comes to raising the rest, Jamie Reynolds voiced little doubt about his cousin's ability: "He's always impressed me as someone who reaches the goal he sets."

Relationship began with oil

year older than Bush

High finance is hardly new for Mercer Reynolds, 58, a prosperous businessman who was born in Chattanooga and moved to Ohio as a Coca-Cola Co. employee before becoming a private investor.

It was his investment in oil that led him to Bush. Early one morning more than 20 years ago, Reynolds was meeting with a geologist at a business club in Midland, Texas, when he was introduced to the future president, who had just finished his daily run.

Reynolds said he was struck by Bush's exuberance. "He loves life. He loves people," said the investor. "I picked that up right away."

They formed a friendship that would become crucial to Bush. In 1984, Reynolds and his Cincinnati business partner, William DeWitt, bought out Bush's struggling oil company.

Later, the two investors helped forge the deal that made Bush a co-owner of the Texas Rangers baseball team.

When Bush won election as Texas governor, Reynolds began to move into the world of political fund-raising.

In Bush's 2000 campaign for president, Reynolds became a "Pioneer," the campaign's designation for supporters who pledged to raise at least $100,000 from friends and associates.

2003-09-24 12:44

After the election, Bush appointed Reynolds as ambassador to Switzerland, a post he held until last spring. He had grown homesick for his five grown children, he said, and returned home with his wife, Gabrielle.

When the president asked him to join the re-election campaign, he quickly agreed.

Reynolds was an ideal choice, said Fred Cooper, a former Republican Party chairman in Georgia. "He's been a successful businessman," Cooper said, and he "believes in the president. He comes without any personal agenda whatsoever."

When Reynolds arrived at the suburban high-rise that houses the campaign just a few miles outside the capital, the daunting $170 million goal already had been set.

At the same time, he inherited tremendous assets for reaching it, including the well-tuned Bush money machine that has been perfecting the art of bringing in checks, both large and small. Perhaps even more important, the campaign has the drawing power of a president energized for the fund-raising circuit.

Moreover, a new federal campaign finance law has given the Bush team a windfall by doubling the amount an individual can donate to $2,000. The Bush campaign has specialized in reaching well-to-do Republican donors who can give the maximum.

As Reynolds put it, the campaign decided that the several hundred Pioneers who raised $100,000 during the first Bush presidential campaign can now "basically call the same people to get them to give $2,000." And so was born a new category, the "Rangers," for those who raise $200,000 each.

Among the first 23 Rangers announced by the campaign are Tanenblatt and Reynolds. Also on the list are DeWitt and Carl H. Lindner, former chief executive of Cincinnati-based Chiquita Brands International food company and owner of the Cincinnati Reds baseball team.

So organized is the Bush campaign that the volunteer fund-raisers are given special ID numbers to be written on donors' checks so they can be properly credited.

Rangers and Pioneers are rewarded with photo sessions with the president and occasional thank-you events.

To mobilize these volunteers, Reynolds has tapped into a seasoned network of Republican and Bush fund-raisers, not to mention dozens of his own friends and associates.

Among them is fellow Cincinnati Richard L. Farmer, founder and chairman of the Cintas work uniform service.

It took no more than a "Dick, I need you" call from Reynolds, said Farmer, who has been raising money for the party for three decades.

Speaking between phone calls inviting friends to the president's fund-raiser Tuesday in Cincinnati, Farmer said he intends to raise at least $200,000 for the president.

"I do this because I think it's important for us to have good government," he said. "I don't have any ax to grind."

2003 SEP 24 11:43 AM

What is Eric's Special ID#? 152

The recent pounding on the president by the Democratic candidates actually may be a boon for fund-raising, Farmer added. "The more competition he's got, I think, the more resolve there is on the part of those who want him to be re-elected."

Donors eager to give again

Some Bush fund-raisers have found that bringing in the dollars takes little persuasion. Among them is Thomas L. Johnson, executive vice president of the Associated General Contractors of Texas and one of the Pioneers raising more than $100,000 for Bush's first presidential campaign.

He volunteered to double that amount this time and has begun calling the past givers from his trade group of highway contractors. His pitch line: "OK, you want to go again?"

So far, Johnson said, they've all answered, "You bet."

To manage the complex operation, Reynolds inherited another asset: Jack Oliver, 34, a behind-the-scenes veteran of the first Bush campaign who recently was dubbed by Time magazine as "Bush's brigadier of bucks."

Reynolds, who calls Oliver "the cowboy," delights in playing pranks on his high-intensity deputy.

Once he arranged delivery of an urgent message telling Oliver to call the office immediately as he stepped off a plane in California.

When Oliver called, Reynolds said with a chuckle, "I just told him that the lead fund-raiser had just been taken away in handcuffs for drug trafficking."

"I almost believed it," said Oliver.

But levity is in short supply in the eighth floor finance wing, where more than a year and a half before the election, Reynolds works 11-hour days when he's not on the road with the president. Many of his staffers stay until 10 p.m. or later, waiting for callbacks from prospective donors.

Reynolds joins in the strategizing over where and when fund-raisers will be held. He hosted an event at his Cincinnati home with first lady Laura Bush and keeps in phone contact with top Pioneers and Rangers.

He has initiated a new fund-raising tactic in which three staff members are leading an outreach to the Jewish community, faith-based groups and the medical field. The goal is to recruit local leaders from these groups who can be featured at fund-raisers.

And recently he initiated a third reward status, "Maverick," for under-40 Republicans who raise $50,000 for the campaign.

Asked why the campaign needs such a pile of money, Reynolds said that's what's required "for the president to deliver his message and defend his record." Although Bush's funds dwarf those of his Democratic rivals, Reynolds is warily watching new, Democratic-leaning groups, especially those allied with organized labor, that promise to raise tens of millions of dollars to oppose Bush.

Funds draw criticism

Very important!
A }

The presidential fund-raising is drawing fire from those who seek to reduce the role of money in politics.

The Bush campaign is "raising these vast amounts of money from a tiny economic elite," said Bonnie Tenneriello, an attorney with the Boston-based National Voting Rights Institute. "They're not just buying influence; they're buying elections."

Fred Wertheimer, whose group Democracy 21 seeks to curb the influence of money in politics, said the funds that the Bush campaign now seeks are "excessive" for an uncontested primary. "When you anoint individuals with special status because they have raised $200,000 . . . that is a problem," he said.

Reynolds dismisses such criticism. "It's obvious that the president is not looking at this as a way of trying to gain influence," he said, adding that the campaign is too big to be dominated by any single group, industry or company.

In a study of the Bush campaign's Federal Election Commission reports, the nonpartisan Center for Responsive Politics found that the largest group of givers so far are associated with financial services, insurance and real estate companies.

Their combined giving is $6 million as of the end of the last reporting period in June. Among individual firms, the largest amount, $282,000, came from employees of the brokerage firm of Merrill Lynch and their families.

The energy industry contributed less than $1 million altogether.

The campaign, which posts all contributions on its Internet site, also boasts a large number of small donations. Of the more than 105,000 people who had written checks to the president's re-election campaign by the end of June, the campaign estimates that 85,000 gave less than $200.

Reynolds said donations of any size gain no promises of favorable treatment. He scoffed at a published report that some Democrats are wondering whether the White House decision to host the G-8 economic summit at Sea Island next year is linked to the fund-raiser across the state at Reynolds Plantation.

Alfred W. "Bill" Jones, chairman of the company that owns the largest Sea Island hotel, gave the Bush campaign $2,000, said Reynolds, adding wryly: "That's hardly worthy of giving someone the G-8."

He said that he was glad for Sea Island's good fortune in getting the summit, but added, "I prefer the plantation."

The energy industry contributed less than $1 million altogether.

The campaign, which posts all contributions on its Internet site, also boasts a large number of donations. Of the more than 105,000 people who had written checks to the president's re-election campaign by the end of June, the campaign estimates that 85,000 gave less than $200.

Reynolds said donations of any size gain no promises of favorable treatment. He scoffed at report that some Democrats are wondering whether the White House decision to host the G8 summit at Sea Island next year is linked to the fund-raiser across the state at Reynolds Plantation.

Mayor Bob Young

Mayor of the consolidated government of Augusta-Richmond County, GA since January 4, 1999. He began his second term on January 3, 2003, following his re-election. He is a member of the Advisory Council for the U.S. Conference of Mayors, and chairs the Conference's standing committee on environment. He is past chairman of the Central Savannah River Area Regional Development Center and chairs the Richmond-Burke Job Training Authority.

Mayor Young is a former member of the board of directors of the Georgia Municipal Association. President George W. Bush appointed Mayor Young to represent the nation's mayors on the Advisory Council for Historic Preservation, where he chairs the Preservation Initiatives Committee.

Mayor Young is an alumnus of the Mayor's Institute on City Design - National Endowment for the Arts. He is a member of the U.S. delegation to the 2001 Jerusalem Conference of Mayors. He represented the Mayors at the 2003 China Mayors Conference in Beijing and was a member of the 2003 US Comm trade mission to Shanghai. Mayor Young was a delegate to the Republican National Convention in 2004 as a Presidential Elector for then-governor George W. Bush.

The mayor's community involvement includes service on the boards of the Central Savannah River Area, Ft. Gordon, Georgia-Carolina Boy Scout Council, Augusta Tomorrow, Augusta Metro Chamber of Commerce, Augusta Arts Council, Historic Augusta, Augusta Museum of History and Augusta International Friends Association. He has been involved in numerous charitable activities, raising hundreds of thousands of dollars for various organizations. In September 2001 Mayor Young led a campaign that raised more than $1 million for the relief of victims of terrorism. Prior to his election, Mayor Young was News Anchor and Assistant News Director for 11 years at WJBF-TV in Augusta, GA. He joined WJBF in 1985 after 13 years as News Director and reporter for WBBQ radio. His political talk show, "The Young Report", was named best talk show by the Georgia Association of Broadcasters. He was a consultant to the award-winning ABC series "China Beach" and was nominated for an Emmy for his documentary, "The Great March."

The readers of Augusta Magazine chose him as the most influential person in the city. His professional affiliations include the Georgia Municipal Association. Bob served four years in the U.S. Marine Corps, where he was twice a platoon sergeant and a Georgia Wing commander for the U.S. Marine Corps.

Deep Impact – A need for new ideas by Tom Crawford on 09/12/03

Reporters covering the Golden Dome this past week seemed to have written one fill-in-the-blank story that kept repeating itself every day, with the name of a new state agency written into the blank space of each article.

The basic story was that Gov. Sonny Perdue's mandated budget reductions were causing state boards and department heads to propose massive cutbacks in their spending plans that they contended would bring about real hardships for Georgia's citizens. This same theme played it itself out every day in the news coverage.

Even state school Supt. Kathy Cox, a conservative Republican, was sounding the alarm about impending budget reductions (her department's budget proposal would lop off more than $400 million in state grants to local school systems). "If we don't find the money for school improvements and technical assistance, are you ready to spend the kind of money we'll have to spend when we take over a school system?" she posed as a rhetorical question for legislators.

These spending cuts are being assembled by the Office of Planning and Budget in anticipation of a budget deficit that could range anywhere from $1 billion to $2 billion by the time the General Assembly convenes in January. Because of Georgia's constitutional requirement for a balanced state budget, lawmakers will have to either come up with some new sources of revenue or implement budget cuts that could close down hospitals and force the layoffs of state employees.

Finding new revenue sources won't be easy, because Perdue has already said he won't support new taxes and some Democratic leaders are also leery of raising taxes. That reluctance can only have been reinforced by Alabama Gov. Bob Riley's crushing defeat at the polls when he tried to restructure that state's tax system.

With "new taxes" off the table, some lawmakers are looking at ways of squeezing more revenues out of existing taxes or suspending old tax breaks for a limited period of time to bring some more dollars into the treasury.

Rep. Chuck Sims (D-Douglas) said he's working on several proposals, including one that would rescind sales tax exemptions for one year, coupled with a 5 percent rollback on state income taxes.

Exhibit Q

9/26/2003

No doubt other proposals for "non-new taxes" will be considered and put forward as the time draws closer for legislators to start working on the budget.

Wiles is in Former House member John Wiles, a Kennesaw attorney, announced Friday he'll run for the District 35 House seat that Rep. Roger Hines (R-Kennesaw) is giving up to run for the 6th Congressional District seat.

Wiles served in the House for eight years, but was shoehorned into the same district with Hines during the 2001 legislative reapportionment and lost to Hines in the 2002 Republican primary election.

"While the Democrats were successful in defeating me by placing me in a new district with another Republican incumbent, I look forward to getting back to the House where I can continue my fight to protect Georgians from crime and make sure that every child has a chance for a good education," Wiles said.

Going after fundraisers

Complaints filed against Gov. Sonny Perdue by ethics activist George Anderson, the former Rome bookstore owner, have been resolved by the State Ethics Commission. The commission recently ruled that no evidence was found to support charges that Perdue had misused campaign funds and dismissed the allegations; Perdue's attorneys settled the other sections of the complaint by providing itemized descriptions of campaign expenditures and the occupations of campaign contributors.

Anderson said he may file another ethics complaint against the Perdue administration and is studying email and calendar information of the governor's top aides that was obtained through an open records request. Perdue Chief of Staff Eric Tanenblatt is listed as a "Ranger" by the George W. Bush campaign committee because he's raised more than $200,000 for Bush's 2004 election effort.

"Eric's got 93 private appointments on his personal calendar," Anderson said. "I'm trying to determine if those private appointments are for fundraising. I really think I'm on to something "

A Perdue spokesman said Tanenblatt's fundraising activities were done on his own time and with his own resources.

"He does not do any fundraising for the president or the governor on state time," said Perdue's communications director Dan McLagan. "He does it at home on his computer or on his cellphone away from the office. He is meticulous about keeping a log of emails from his home computer and phone calls from his cellphone and home phone."

he lied.

Groundbreaking

The University System Georgia's office of information and instructional technology broke ground Thursday for the construction of an 80,000-square-foot facility in Oconee County. The building, which will house about 165 employees, will be equipped with high-speed internet access and fiber-optic cable and is designed to handle future expansion up to 220 employees. The office of information and instructional technology administers computer systems for the 34 institutions in the University System and is responsible for the delivery of online distance learning classes.

THE STATE OF GEORGIA

EXECUTIVE ORDER

BY THE GOVERNOR:

ESTABLISHING A CODE OF ETHICS FOR EXECUTIVE BRANCH OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

WHEREAS: in order to maintain the public trust, it is essential that the government function in a manner consistent with the highest ethical standards; and

WHEREAS: in carrying out their official duties and obligations, all officers and employees of state government must work solely for the public good, striving vigilantly to avoid even the appearance that their actions are motivated by private or personal interest; and

WHEREAS: it is in the best interests of the State of Georgia that consistent policies on ethics be applied to all executive officers and employees; and

WHEREAS: State employees should use their powers and resources to further the public interest and not for any financial or other personal benefit, other than salaried compensation and employer-provided benefits;

WHEREAS: State employees must safeguard their ability to make objective, fair, and impartial decisions and therefore should not accept benefits of any sort under circumstances in which it could be inferred by a reasonable observer that the benefit was intended to influence a pending or future decision or to reward a past decision; and

WHEREAS: State employees must avoid any conduct, whether in the context of business, financial, or social relationships, which might undermine the public trust, whether that conduct is unethical or lends itself to the appearance of ethical impropriety.

NOW, THEREFORE, BY THE POWER VESTED IN ME AS GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF GEORGIA, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED: That the Executive Order establishing an Ethics in Government Policy of January 29, 1999 is hereby RESCINDED and the following ethics policies are hereby adopted.

Exhibit S

9909. EEO. ST. 43

Section 1. Persons Subject to this Executive Order

a. The following persons are subject to this Executive Order:

- i. All employees in the Governor's Office and the Office of the Governor.
- ii. The heads of all State agencies who are appointed by the Governor.
- iii. Any other employees of Executive Branch officials, departments, boards, bureaus, agencies, commissions, councils, authorities, corporations, entities or instrumentalities of any kind, and others as may be designated by the Governor, to the extent that such designation does not conflict with Georgia law.

b. As used in this Order the term:

(i) "Agency" means any Executive Branch department, board, bureau, agency, commission, council, authority, corporation, entity, or instrumentality of any kind, and others as may be designated by the Governor, to the extent that such designation does not conflict with Georgia law.

(ii) "Agency head" means the executive head of an agency.

(iii) "Charitable organization" shall have the meaning defined in O.C.G.A. Section 45-20-51.

(iv) "Employee" shall mean any employee in the Office of the Governor, including the Governor, and any employee of any agency as defined herein.

(v) "Family member" means a spouse, parent, grandparent, child, brother, sister, uncle, aunt, nephew, niece, first cousin, father-in-law, mother-in-law, son-in-law, daughter-in-law, brother-in-law, sister-in-law, stepparent, stepchild, stepbrother, stepsister, half brother, or half sister.

(vi) "Gift" means anything of value exceeding $25, including, but not limited to, food, lodging, transportation, personal services, gratuities, subscriptions, memberships, trips, loans, extensions of credit, forgiveness of debts, or advances or deposits of money.

(vii) "Lobbyist" shall have the meaning defined in O.C.G.A. Section 21-5-70(6).

(viii) "Officer" means the Governor and the heads of all State agencies who are appointed by the Governor. For purposes of this Order, all "officers" are also "employees" as that term is defined herein.

24.19.025.2667

(ix) "Person" means an individual, partnership, committee, association, corporation, labor organization, or any other organization or group of individuals.

(x) "Value" means the actual retail price or cost attributable to a gift, less applicable taxes and gratuities or a reasonable estimate based upon customary charges for like goods or services in the locality. A series of tickets to sporting, entertainment, or similar events shall be valued as one gift. Entrance fees, admission fees, or other tickets shall be valued at the face value of the ticket or fee, excluding any portion attributable to a charitable contribution, if provided by a charitable organization.

Section 2. Ethics Officer

a. Each agency, as well as the Office of the Governor, shall designate an Ethics Officer. The Ethics Officer shall take appropriate measures to ensure that the agency's employees become familiar with applicable ethics laws and policies, including the policies set forth in this Order.

b. The Executive Counsel is hereby designated the Ethics Officer of the Office of the Governor.

Section 3. Conflicts of Interest

1. An employee of the Executive Branch of the State shall make every effort to avoid even the appearance of a conflict of interest. An appearance of conflict exists when a reasonable person would conclude from the circumstances that the employee's ability to protect the public interest, or perform public duties, is compromised by personal interests. An appearance of conflict could exist even in the absence of a true conflict of interest.

2. An employee of the Executive Branch of the State shall recuse himself or herself from any proceeding in which the employee's impartiality might reasonably be questioned due to the employee's personal or financial relationship with a participant in the proceeding. A "participant" includes, but is not limited to, an owner, shareholder, partner, employee, or agent of a business entity involved in the proceeding. If the employee is uncertain whether the relationship justifies recusal, then the employee shall disclose the relationship to the person presiding over the proceeding. The presiding officer shall determine the extent to which, if any, the employee will be permitted to participate. If the affected employee is the person presiding, then the vice chair or such other substitute presiding officer shall make the determination.

Section 4. Gifts

i. Except as provided in paragraph ii below, no employee, nor any person on his or her behalf, shall accept, directly or indirectly, any gift from any person with whom the employee interacts on official state business, including, without limitation, lobbyists and state vendors. If a gift has been accepted, it must be either returned to the donor or transferred to a charitable organization.

ii. Where appropriate for purposes of tradition, ceremony, or inter-governmental relations, or when acting as a representative of the Office of the Governor or an agency, an employee may accept a gift on behalf of an agency or the Office of the Governor. If the gift retains value after its acceptance, the employee must: (a) maintain custody of the gift no longer than reasonably necessary to arrange for the transfer of custody of the gift to the agency or Office of the Governor, or to a charitable organization on behalf of such agency or Office of the Governor; (b) file a report with the designated Ethics Officer no later than 30 days after receipt of the gift containing a description of the gift, the approximate monetary value thereof, the name and address of the person making the gift, the date the gift was made, and the disposition of the gift.

Section 5. Honoraria

No employee may accept any honoraria whatsoever.

Section 6. Expenses

An employee on whose behalf actual and reasonable expenses for food, beverages, travel, lodging, and registration are paid to permit the employee's participation in a meeting related to official or professional duties of the employee shall file a report no later than the 30 days after such expenses are paid. The report shall be filed with the designated Ethics Officer. The report must contain a description of each expense, the monetary value thereof, the name and address of the person paying such expense, and the purpose, date, and location of the meeting. Notwithstanding this provision, the preferred practice is for agencies and not third parties to pay such expenses.

Section 7. Nepotism

An employee shall not advocate for or cause the advancement, appointment, employment, promotion, or transfer of a family member to an office or position with an agency or with the Office of the Governor.

Section 8. Lobbying

a. The use of lobbyists will not be required or preferred as a way to obtain access to employees. Employees will strongly encourage any lobbyist wishing to meet with the Governor or his staff regarding his or her client and/or principal to bring a principal of his or her client to such meeting.

b. Former employees should not use their former positions for financial or other personal gain or to influence legislation or procurement decisions. Employees shall decline to communicate on official government matters with any lobbyist who was an officer within the preceding one-year period.

c. No agency shall be permitted to contract with any person to provide lobbying, as that term is defined in O.C.G.A. § 21-5-70(5), services on behalf of that agency.

d. Employees who promote or oppose the passage of any legislation by the General Assembly, or any committee thereof, shall coordinate all such activities with the Office of the Governor.

Section 9. Judicial Appointments

The following persons shall not be eligible for appointment by the Governor to fill a vacancy on the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals, the superior courts, or the state courts: (a) any person who has made a contribution to, or expenditure on behalf of, the Governor or the Governor's campaign committee at any time after the vacancy occurs; or (b) any person who has made a contribution to, or expenditure on behalf of, the Governor or the Governor's campaign committee within the 30 days preceding the vacancy, unless such person requests and is granted a refund of such contribution or reimbursement of such expenditure.

Section 10. Fair and Equal Access

Employees are required to afford all constituents fair and equal opportunity to express their concerns and ideas regarding State programs and policies without regard to their political affiliation, sophistication, or affluence. Recommendations and decisions made by employees in the performance of their duties shall be made without bias.

Section 11. Dual Employment/Board Service

a. No employee shall serve for compensation as a corporate officer or director of any for-profit or publicly held company. Voluntary, pro bono services on behalf of non-profit organizations may be permitted, so long as services to such organizations would not have the potential to create a conflict and do not impair the employee's ability to discharge his or her public duties fully, faithfully, and impartially.

b. No officer may have any ongoing dual employment.

Section 12. Political Activities X

a. Employees wishing to take part in political activities are responsible for complying with applicable federal and state law.

b. Employees are prohibited from soliciting or knowingly accepting any campaign contribution in a governmental building or office. "Accept" means to receive a contribution by personal hand-delivery from a contributor or his agent. This does not apply when a government-owned building or any portion thereof is rented for the specific purpose of holding a campaign fundraiser.

c. Employees are permitted to express their opinions on political subjects and candidates and to take an active part in political campaigns outside of working hours, including the wearing of badges or buttons and displaying of bumper stickers and posters. Employees are encouraged to vote.

d. Employees who wish to seek office must comply with applicable federal and state laws. Employees must notify the designated Ethics Officer prior to announcing or qualifying for any elected position or office.

Section 13. Personal Use of Telephone and Internet Access

a. Personal long-distance calls shall not be charged to State telephones. Employees must use their personal long-distance credit card or other personal resource for this purpose. It is also inappropriate to use a State cellular telephone for personal calls.

b. State-provided internet access is intended for public business. Employee use of the internet may be recorded and monitored. No employee is permitted to use or access the internet for pornographic, obscene, or other improper purposes.

Section 14. Miscellaneous

There may be unique or compelling circumstances warranting exceptions to or waivers from these policies in certain individual cases. In those instances, prior written approval of the designated Ethics Officer is required.

Section 15. Sanctions

Each agency head shall make a copy of this Order available to all employees and shall institute procedures for its enforcement consistent with all applicable Georgia laws. Employees who violate this Order are subject to disciplinary action, including termination of employment, subject to review by the Executive Counsel. The agency head of each agency shall be responsible to the Office of the Governor for the faithful enforcement of this Order, and shall report all alleged violations to the Inspector General.

COMMISSION FOR A NEW GEORGIA

Statement of Governor Perdue Regarding Ethics Reform

As Governor of the State of Georgia, I have the honor to announce my support for the proposed ethics reform legislation. I believe that these reforms are essential to ensure the highest standards of integrity and transparency in our government.

The proposed reforms will establish a clear and consistent set of rules for public officials, ensuring that they are held to the same high standards of conduct as the citizens they serve. I am confident that these reforms will restore public trust in our government and ensure that our leaders are acting in the best interests of the people of Georgia.

I have signed Executive Order 12, which directs all state agencies to review their policies and procedures to ensure compliance with the proposed ethics reform legislation. I am committed to ensuring that our government operates with the highest level of integrity and transparency.

I encourage all public officials to embrace these reforms and to act with the highest level of integrity and transparency. I am confident that these reforms will ensure that our government is the most ethical and transparent in the nation.

I am proud to lead a government that is committed to the highest standards of integrity and transparency. I am confident that these reforms will ensure that our government is the most ethical and transparent in the nation.

I am proud to lead a government that is committed to the highest standards of integrity and transparency. I am confident that these reforms will ensure that our government is the most ethical and transparent in the nation.

I am proud to lead a government that is committed to the highest standards of integrity and transparency. I am confident that these reforms will ensure that our government is the most ethical and transparent in the nation.

Re: Open Records Request

Dear Mr. Anderson:

We have received your open records request dated 7 August 2003, received in our office 8 August 2003. As you discussed yesterday with our assistant, Aimee Brandenburg, the records are available for inspection here in our office. Also, per your request, and for your convenience, we have copied the six phone logs you requested to the enclosed CD-ROM.

With reference to your request for "cell phone calls [and] bills," no member of the Governor's staff has a state-paid cellular telephone, and no member of the Governor's staff has ever requested reimbursement from the State for calls on a personal cellular telephone. Therefore, no records responsive to your request exist.

If we may be of any further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact us.

Sincerely,

Robert S. Highsmith Jr.
Deputy Executive Counsel

The Bush-Cheney Gazillions Tour

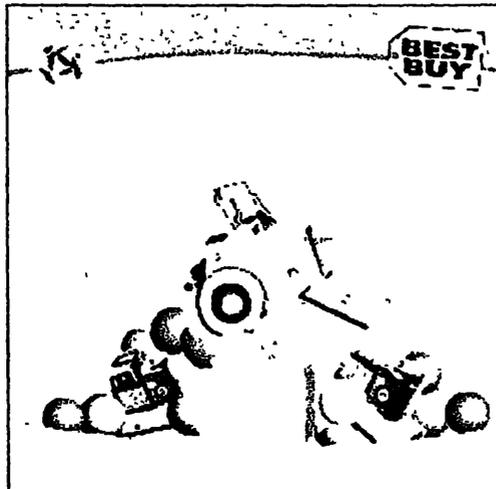

by Ward Harkavy

October 22 - 28, 2003

Sidebar:

Change Is in the Air for Democratic Challengers by Ward Harkavy

President Bush's re-election campaign has coupled the time-honored tradition of the chicken-dinner whistle-stop tour with the 21st-century technology of electronic check-tracking and a bit of Texas terminology to produce a monster of political fundraising.

"Soft money" has been outlawed. And individual contributions are limited to $2,000 each. Now the key word is "bundling."

Bush has three levels of bundlers who woo friends and allies to high-ticket (usually $1,000-a-plate) campaign lunches and dinners. Rangers are those committed to raising at least $200,000 each for the campaign; Pioneers have a goal of $100,000; and Mavericks are the under-40 crowd aiming at $50,000 each. (During the 2000 campaign, Bush had only the Pioneer category, of which Enron's Ken Lay was a member.)

Donors at the rallies put special tracking numbers on their campaign checks so that Dubya's workers can credit bundlers as they try to meet their goals. Scores of top Republicans, including elected and appointed officials, are already Rangers and Pioneers, of course, and their loyalty is still tallied. Donors get the thrill of hearing either George W. Bush or Dick Cheney at the event. Bundlers get hang time with party and business celebrities, perhaps even with Dubya or Dick.

Bush-Cheney 04 Inc., the official name of the president's campaign, has hauled in more than $70 million of its total $84.7 million war chest from the nationwide Dubya-Dick tour alone. And that's just through September 30. The president may top $200 million, twice what he spent in 2000, when he had primary opponents.

"Ohhhh, I think we'll raise about a gazillion dollars. Maybe three or four gazillion," Al Hoffman, finance chairman of the Republican National Committee, said of an upcoming stop by Bush at Hoffman's Florida home.

Following is the Bush campaign's official list of 100 Rangers, 185 Pioneers, and 20 Mavericks. Watchdog groups suspect that there are hundreds more. But who's counting?

The

Bush-Cheney 04 Inc. is breeding another generation of Al Hoffman- type fundraisers, the under-40 Mavericks. Here are the 20 that the campaign lists "as of September 30":

Tony Antone, Michigan: A top aide to a developer, and already a Pioneer. (The Bush campaign's data on who's a Pioneer, Maverick, or Ranger contains other such inconsistencies.) He's a former aide to fellow Arab American Michigan pol Spencer Abraham, now secretary of energy.

Jeff Ballabon, New York: Rising star among what The Forward calls "a cadre of Generation X Republican Jewish activists, many of them Orthodox." A hawk on Israel—even The Forward refers to him as a right-winger in that sense. "The president will give the Palestinians as much slack as they need to have a fair shot at success, or to hang themselves," Ballabon has said. Co-chaired a June 23 fundraising dinner starring Bush in Manhattan that raked in $4 million. Heads the public-policy department at magazine and Web behemoth Primedia. As a Court TV executive, was a key figure early on in negotiating with states to allow cameras in their courtrooms.

David Catania, District of Columbia : One of the most visible openly gay politicians in D.C., the Republican member of the D.C. Council was first elected in 1997. Supports school vouchers.

W

Marshall Cooper, New Hampshire: Executive at Kennedy Information. Was the original publisher, a few years ago, of Consulting magazine, now a bible of the industry. The magazine's Top 25 consultants of 2002 included Rudy Giuliani, ex-New York City police commissioner Bernard Kerik, and current Iraq pasha, L. Paul "Jerry" Bremer.

Husein Cumber, Florida: Listed by the campaign as both a Pioneer and a Ranger. Assistant vice president for public affairs for Florida East Coast Industries (FECI), a key branch of Florida's largest private landholder, the St. Joe Co. Former campaign aide to Governor Jeb Bush. "What you're seeing," Cumber has said of his fundraising for Dubya, "is a group of people that all have distinct Rolodexes as well as the ability to reach out into their communities." This past July, a Miami/Dade County environmental agency reached into the low-income Hialeah community to begin investigating whether FECI, which is facing whistle-blower lawsuits, has covered up hazardous-materials spills at its rail yard there since the mid 1990s.

Paul Dickerson, Texas: Houston tax, contracts, and business-planning lawyer. Already a Pioneer. Appointed in 2001 to the Texas Board of Chiropractic Examiners. Told Texas Lawyer magazine in December 2002 that one of his five favorite Web-surfing sites was appointee.brookings.org. Why? "This nonpartisan site helps presidential nominees during their political appointment process. It is an amazing resource for those interested in presidential appointments." Six months later, Dickerson, only five years out of law school and just an associate at Houston firm Haynes and Boone, was appointed to the U.S. Secretary of Commerce and U.S. Trade Representative's Industry Sector Advisory Committee on Services for Trade Policy Matters, where he rubs elbows with such fellow members as Donald A. Deline, director of government affairs for Halliburton, and Laura Lane, Time Warner Inc.'s vice president for international public policy.

Christopher Egan, Massachusetts: Son of Richard Egan, founder of Massachusetts computer database firm EMC and appointed by Bush as ambassador to Ireland after being fined by the FEC for exceeding contribution limits. Richard Egan, who had no diplomatic experience, served for two years before retiring. Chris, brother Mike, and Pop are all Rangers—the only such family trio in the country. Since 1999, the Egans have given almost $900,000 to federal candidates and party committees, 91 percent of it to Republicans.

Lisa Gable, Virginia: Expert in "brand consultancy" for financial and high-tech firms. Strong fundraiser for Bush in California during the 2000 campaign, when she was Silicon Valley "e-chair" for the ticket. Member of the President's Commission on White House Fellowships, which (in an e-mail sent out far and wide, naturally) she calls "America's most prestigious program for leadership and public service" and notes that they are are handed out on a "strictly non-partisan basis." Also raises funds for other fundraisers: She hosted a fundraising event late last month for Virginia house speaker William J. Howell, the most prolific GOP fundraiser in her adopted state.

Todd Huston, Indiana: Already a Pioneer, he's got the pedigree—his uncle Tom was a counsel in the Nixon White House; his sister, Julie Huston Thomas, works for Dubya. Class of '94 at Indiana University, Todd, director of business operations at Komputrol, unsuccessfully tried to bring Pat Buchanan to campus to counter appearances by the likes of Spike Lee and Angela Davis. Unbowed, back in 2001 he refused to donate to his alma mater because an IU branch in Fort Wayne was putting on a production of Terrence McNally's Corpus Christi. "If they want to have a play like this," Huston told The Indianapolis Star, "they should next put on a play with a true biblical representation of Christ."

Mary Kate Johnson, Maryland: Finance director of Bush's Presidential Inaugural Committee in 2001.

John Kelly, Washington: Treasurer of Microsoft's political action committee. Personally donated $100,000 to Bush's 2001 Presidential Inaugural Committee, which raised a total of $28.8 million. Member of Washington state's "magnificent seven" cadre of young GOP strategists.

John Kern, Ohio: Business partner of Mercer Reynolds and (St. Louis Cardinals owner) Bill DeWitt Jr., the Cincinnati duo who helped Dubya get started in the oil business. Reynolds isn't listed as a Ranger, but he's a better fundraiser than any of them, having been termed in the press as Dubya's "$170 million man." Cincy donors have given Bush's 2004 campaign $814,600 so far. Kern's zip code, 45243, has given the most money to Bush outside of New York City.

Craig Kunkle, Indiana: Operations and finance director for the Indiana Republican Party.

Rob Leebern, Georgia: Already a Pioneer, Leebern managed Saxby Chambliss's successful U.S. Senate bid in 2002. (He had been Chambliss's chief of staff when the pol was in the U.S. House.) A year ago, Leebern was hired as a D.C. lobbyist for the Atlanta powerhouse law firm Troutman Sanders, which represents, among many other corporations, energy giant Southern Co. The 500-person law firm has 54 attorneys in D.C., many of them dealing with Southern's numerous regulatory issues. Troutman Sanders was cited as one of Southern Co.'s primary litigators in the National Law Journal's annual listing "Who Defends Corporate America." Troutman Sanders also defended Georgia Power Co. against what the Fulton County Daily Report called "a potential class action by African American workers who claimed that hangman's nooses were hung in their workplaces and that they were harassed and systematically shortchanged in promotions and pay." The suit was dismissed.

Paul Maynard, Minnesota: A Deloitte & Touche executive in the Twin Cities who moved over from Arthur Andersen in the summer of 2002.

Stephen Payne, Texas: A Houston business consultant who already made Pioneer and, as a result, got invited to an August 9 barbecue in Crawford, where he and 350 other bundlers mingled with Bush and his top aides and were herded to the Broken Spoke Ranch, just down the road from Bush's spread.

Don Peay, Utah: Known as the person who "dictates wildlife policy in Utah," Peay heads the politically active, 10,000-member Sportsmen for Fish and Wildlife. "Our focus is to grow more critters and have a fair way to divvy them up," he said. A Western Wildlife Conservancy spokesman told The Salt Lake Tribune that Peay bullies his opponents as "wild-eyed environmentalists and extremists." But pro-basketball star Karl Malone, a hunting buddy of Peay's, said, "The day I met him is the day I said, 'He's a leader.' So am I." Malone, a longtime Utah Jazz player now with the Los Angeles Lakers (and a contributor to the Utah GOP), is pondering a run for Utah governor; he's discussed it with Peay. "Governor Ventura—he was a wrestler, and he won it," Malone told a reporter. "So why not?"

Bryan Pickens, Texas: Already a Pioneer.

Eric Tanenblatt, Georgia : Among the first 23 Rangers, along with Bill DeWitt Jr. and Chiquita banana boss and former S&L figure Charles Keating partner Carl Lindner. A transplant from Long Island, Tanenblatt is chief of staff for Governor Sonny Perdue, the first Republican to hold that office in more than a century. Raised a Republican, Tanenblatt found his ardor intensified when he ran into a president during a D.C. internship. "I met Ronald Reagan," he recalled for The Los Angeles Times, "and I don't know what it was, but something came over me."

Tanenblatt co-chaired Bush's 2000 campaign in Georgia and then worked on Perdue's historic gubernatorial bid last year.

George H. Walker IV, New York: Dubya's second cousin and already a Pioneer, he lives on Greene Street in Soho and, still in his early 30s, is co-head of Goldman, Sachs & Co.'s Hedge Fund Strategies Group, which services wealthy investors. A Phi Beta Kappa grad of the Wharton School, he became a Goldman partner at age 29—one of the youngest ever. "I'm very proud of my family, but I don't talk about them," he says. "That's not something that is going to make our clients money."

Of the 100 listed by the Bush campaign, 14 are from Florida, 12 from Texas, 11 from California, and eight from New York.

Bush's campaign has been lauded for releasing its bundler lists. But watchdogs such as Texans for Public Justice and The Nation contend that there are hundreds more Pioneers and have pressed the campaign to release a full list. TPJ's extensive website () on the campaign includes a spreadsheet tracking what it says are more than 500 Pioneer program participants.
