I. INTRODUCTION

Complainant, a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in 2016, alleges that Fox News Network, LLC ("Fox News"), violated the Commission's regulations governing candidate debates by excluding him from the debate it sponsored on August 6, 2015.2

Specifically, the Complaint alleges that Fox News structured the debate in a manner that improperly promoted and advanced certain candidates in violation of 11 C.F.R. § 110.13(b)(2), and failed to apply objective candidate selection criteria in violation of 11 C.F.R. § 110.13(c), focusing on what the Complaint terms as Respondent's "last minute" switch in the selection criteria.\(^3\) Respondent denies the allegations and asserts that it modified its selection criteria to expand, not restrict, the opportunity for candidates to participate in the debate.\(^4\)

For the reasons stated below, we recommend that the Commission find reason to believe that Respondent violated 52 U.S.C. § 30118(a) in connection with the debate and enter into pre-probable cause conciliation with Respondent.

II. FACTUAL AND LEGAL ANALYSIS

A. Factual Background

Complainant was a Republican candidate for President.\(^5\) Fox News, a limited liability company ("LLC") registered with the State of New York, is a broadcaster that owns and operates two national cable television networks — the Fox News Channel and the Fox Business Network — and it is a subsidiary of Twenty-First Century Fox, Inc.\(^6\)

In January 2015, the Republican National Committee announced plans for twelve Republican presidential debates to be hosted by various news organizations throughout 2015 and 2016.\(^7\) Respondent was selected to stage the first debate, which was to be held on August 6, 2015, at the Quicken Loans Arena in Cleveland, Ohio.\footnote{See Press Release, \textit{Fox News And Facebook Partner To Host First Republican Presidential Primary Debate of 2016 Election} (May 2015), http://press.foxnews.com/2015/05/fox-news-and-facebook-partner-to-host-first-republican-presidential-primary-debate-of-2016-election/ (Resp. Attach. A).} Fox News' Executive Vice President of News (Editorial) Michael Clemente announced that the entry criteria for that debate would require, among other things, that a candidate place in the top ten of an average of the five most recent national polls, as recognized by Fox News, leading up to August 4th.

On June 11, 2015, Respondent announced that it would expand the opportunity for candidate participation by staging and broadcasting an additional debate on August 6, 2015.\footnote{Resp. at 2.} This additional debate would be open to Republican presidential candidates who did not poll among the top ten, and therefore did not qualify for the main debate, but who received the support of at least 1% of poll respondents in an average of the five most recent national polls, as recognized by Fox News, leading up to August 4.\footnote{Id.}

On July 27, 2015 — approximately six weeks after announcing the criteria for the second-tier debate and ten days before it was to be held — Respondent announced it was changing the eligibility criteria for the second-tier debate. Specifically, Respondent announced it was relaxing the requirement that a candidate poll at 1% in the five most recent national polls to require instead that the candidate’s name be “consistently . . . offered to respondents in major national polls (as recognized by Fox News) leading up to August 4.”\footnote{Id. at 3.} Mr. Clemente stated that this change of criterion resulted from “a concerted effort to include and accommodate the now 16 Republican candidate field.”\footnote{In full, the relevant portion of Clemente’s reported statement was: “Due to the overwhelming interest in the FOX News Facebook Debate Event Night on August 6th and in a concerted effort to include and accommodate the} Applying the new criterion, Respondent ultimately hosted seventeen candidates on August 6 — ten in the top-tier debate and seven in the second-tier debate. The Complaint questions Respondent’s “last minute” switch to the requirement that candidates’ names must be “consistently” offered to respondents in polls recognized by Fox News, and argues that “consistently” is not an objective standard, as required under the Commission’s regulation. The Complaint asserts that Respondent “does not provide any enlightenment or even any guidance to the candidates and their organizations on how it, as the sole arbiter, will define ‘consistently’; nor does it give even a hint about which ‘major national polls’ it . . . will use to test eligibility.”

In addition, the Complaint alleges that Respondent has failed to demonstrate that its debate structure and selection process were not designed to result in the selection of pre-chosen participants, and asserts that a statement made by Clemente — that “[w]e made a concerted effort to include and accommodate” — confirms the opposite.

Finally, the Complaint argues that Respondent could have used the Republican National Committee’s on-line straw poll — which it argues is “a solid reflection of ‘real’ GOP candidates [that] objectively draws the line between serious and inconsequential candidates” — a choice that would have included Everson in the debate.
In response, the Respondent asserts that it did not structure the debate to "promote or advance" one candidate over another, and the pre-existing criteria it applied for selecting debate participants "are consistent with the FEC regulations governing such events."

B. Legal Analysis

The Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended (the "Act"), prohibits corporations from making contributions to federal candidates. Funds used or provided "to defray costs incurred in staging candidate debates" are not contributions, provided that the debates are conducted "in accordance with the provisions of 11 C.F.R. §§ 110.13 and 114.4(f)." Sections 110.13 and 114.4(f), respectively, provide in relevant part that a broadcaster (including a cable television operator, programmer, or producer) staging a candidate debate has "discretion" regarding how to structure its debate but "must use pre-established objective criteria to determine which candidates may participate in the debate." Thus, the

As a general matter, spending by a broadcaster (including a cable television operator) to carry a news story, commentary, or editorial does not constitute a contribution. 11 C.F.R. § 100.73(a). Thus, in the context of a debate, the Commission’s regulations specifically note that media entities may "cover or carry" debates "as press entities." See id. § 110.13(a)(2). When a media entity stages a debate, however, the Commission’s regulations require the staging organization to comply with the same rules as any other debate staging organization. See id. § 110.13(c) (setting forth candidate-invitation rules "for all debates" and "staging organization(s)" (emphasis added)); MUR 5395 (Dow Jones, et al.) (explaining that the Commission analyzes the staging of debates by media entities under the debate regulations, and the coverage or broadcast of debates by such entities under the media exemption); Factual and Legal Analysis at 5-8, MUR 6703 (WCVB-TV, Channel 5) (analyzing whether a debate hosted by a media entity satisfied the requirements of the debate exemption where complainant challenged respondent’s debate criteria and where respondent asserted that the press exemption also applied); Factual and Legal Analysis at 4-10, MUR 6493 (Fox News Channel) (analyzing media entity’s challenged debate criteria under the Commission’s debate regulations). Requiring a media entity that stages a debate to use objective, pre-established selection criteria not designed to result in the selection of pre-chosen candidates ensures that the media entity is acting within its "legitimate press function" in staging the debate, such that the entity’s spending is properly exempt from treatment as a contribution. See 60 Fed. Reg. at 64,261 (noting}\] issues raised here are whether Respondent’s criteria for inviting candidates to the second-tier debate were “objective” and “pre-established.”

To qualify as “objective,” criteria need not “be stripped of all subjectivity or be judged only in terms of tangible, arithmetical cut-offs. Rather, it appears that they must be free of ‘content bias,’ and not geared to the ‘selection of certain pre-chosen participants.’” Likewise, as the Commission noted in promulgating section 110.13(c), to establish that the criteria were set in advance of selecting the debate participants, staging organizations “must be able to show that their objective criteria were used to pick the participants, and that the criteria were not designed to result in the selection of certain pre-chosen participants.” Accordingly, candidate selection criteria are neither “objective” nor “pre-established” within the meaning of section 110.13(c) if those criteria are designed to result in the selection of particular candidates whom the debate-staging organization has “pre-chosen.”

The undisputed factual record presented here provides ample reason to believe that Respondent did not stage its second-tier debate in accordance with 11 C.F.R. § 110.13(c).

Rather, in announcing the challenged revision to its polling criterion, Respondent conceded that it changed that requirement shortly before the scheduled event specifically to result in the selection of a pre-chosen field of participants. As the debate neared, it became clear that the numerical polling requirement for the second-tier debate might exclude several high-profile but low-polling candidates. Respondent then changed the criteria to eliminate the numerical polling threshold in particular, "in a concerted effort to include and accommodate the now 16 Republican candidate field." Given that well more than 16 people were declared candidates for the Republican nomination at the time — and the group of top-ten candidates scheduled to participate in the main debate was largely set — Respondent's reference to "including" and accommodating the "now 16 Republican candidate[s]" reflects that Respondent had identified a specific set of candidates that it wanted to include in the second-tier debate, and that it modified its polling criterion to achieve that result. Because Respondent used candidate-selection criteria that were designed to result in the selection of pre-chosen candidates, the debate was not conducted in accordance with section 110.13.

Even considering each element of the debate-staging regulation separately, the conclusion remains the same. First, the revision to the polling criterion was not "pre-established," that is, established in advance of choosing the desired debate participants. Rather, Respondent made the change, in its words, specifically "to include and accommodate" those members of the "now" larger field — i.e., to include certain anticipated participants when it became apparent (only 10 days before the debate) they were not going to meet the numerical threshold. Because Respondent apparently decided whom to invite before it revised the criterion

24 See POLITICO Article, supra (noting that "[t]he change amounts to an insurance policy for candidates who were in danger of being disqualified from the vital first debate based on low polls — Carly Fiorina, former New York Gov. George Pataki and Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-S.C.")."

25 Resp. at 5 (quoting POLITICO Article, supra) (emphasis added). Although Clemente mentioned a 16-candidate field, a total of 17 candidates participated in either the top-tier or second-tier debate.

26 According to press reports, the tenth and final spot in the main debate was decided upon two days before the debate. See Maggie Haberman, John Kasich Is In, Rick Perry Is Out in First Republican Debate, N.Y. TIMES (Aug. 4, 2015).
in a manner that would include them, the criterion was not "pre-established" under section 110.13. Second, the same holds true for the objectivity of the altered polling criterion. Respondent abandoned a firm, numerical standard in favor of a less precise measure — "consistency" — only after it had become apparent that the numerical test would exclude certain high-profile participants, and did so to "include and accommodate the now 16 Republican candidate field." That is, Respondent altered its criteria to cause the selection of a pre-chosen set of participants. A criterion that is altered specifically to fulfill a debate-staging entity's subjective desire to invite certain candidates (but not others) is not "objective" within the meaning of section 110.13.27

In sum, the record reflects that Respondent used candidate-selection criteria designed to result in the inclusion of certain pre-chosen candidates, criteria that in context were neither objective nor pre-established. The second-tier debate therefore was not conducted in accordance with section 110.13 and the contribution exception of 11 C.F.R. § 100.92 does not apply.28 Accordingly, we recommend that the Commission find reason to believe that Fox News Network, LLC, violated 52 U.S.C. § 30118(a).29

27 The Commission has previously accepted the objectivity of a variety of non-numerical formulae where the selection criteria nonetheless remained content-neutral as applied. But none of those instances involved the exceptional combination of facts presented here: that is, abandoning a precise numerical polling standard in favor of a vague requirement on the eve of the debate for the admitted purpose of expanding the field to include candidates who would not otherwise satisfy that criterion. Cf., e.g., MURs 4956, 4962, 4963 (Union Leader Corporation, et al.) (approving criteria such as significant candidate and campaign organization presence); MUR 5395 (Dow Jones, et al.) (approving criteria such as active campaigning, ability to fundraise, and standing in public polls); MUR 5650 (University of Arizona) (approving criteria such as level of campaign activity and significant voter interest).

28 See Comm'rs Aikens, Thomas, Elliott, McDonald, McGarry, Statement of Reasons at 4, MURs 4451, 4473 (Comm'n on Presidential Debates, et al.).

29 Respondent asserts that the debate at issue fell within the media exemption at 52 U.S.C. § 30101(9)(B)(i). Resp. at 2, 5. However, as explained above, see supra n.21, the Commission has previously concluded that the general media exemption does not afford media entities that elect to stage debates a license to disregard the debate staging rules that apply to all other debate-staging organizations.
we recognize that Respondent was presented with a challenging and quickly evolving situation. The field included an unanticipated number of viable candidates with only negligible room to differentiate among reasonable contenders. In the face of these difficulties, as Respondent notes, it sought to broaden rather than restrict participation in its debates, an event that was the subject of exceptional public interest.\(^\text{31}\)

IV. RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Find reason to believe that Fox News Network, LLC, violated 52 U.S.C. § 30118(a);
2. Approve the attached Factual and Legal Analysis;
3. Enter into conciliation with Fox News Network, LLC, prior to a finding of probable cause to believe;
4. Approve the attached conciliation agreement; and
5. Approve the appropriate letter.
